The mortgagors covenant with the mortgagee as follows:

A. (Check applicable box below):

- ☒ That they are the owners in fee simple of all the above-described property and that the same is unencumbered;
☐ that they are the owners of the above-described mobile home, which is unencumbered except by the above-described security agreement held by the mortgagee, and the owners in fee simple of the above-described real property, which is encumbered only by a prior mortgage or trust deed;
☐ that they are the owners of the above-described mobile home, which is unencumbered except by the above-described security agreement held by the mortgagee, and the contract purchasers of the above-described real property which is otherwise unencumbered.

5. That they will during the continuance of the foregoing part of the service of the Government, will pay to the Government, or to the Treasury or to the Department of the Interior, upon the receipt of property, and upon this receipt to be given, the money or value received, and will keep the property free and clear of all other encumbrances, including the mortgage or security, and will timely render up to the Government, the proceeds and conditions of the above-mentioned security agreement, and of the other contracts, mortgages, and other obligations.

I shall, the mortgagee, or its assigns or the foregoing successors, or any of the successors of the above-assigned lender, or any of the successors of any prior assignee mortgagee of trust deed, then the mortgagee may perform them, or cause them to be performed, or have them performed, and all expenditures in that behalf shall be secured by this mortgage and the proceeds of the sale of the property hereunder, and the same shall be recoverable by the mortgagee as debt.

It was not until 1964 that the first major study of the effects of the Vietnam War on the American public was published. This study, conducted by the RAND Corporation, found that the war had a significant impact on the mental health of the American public, particularly among young men who had served in the military. The study also found that the war had a significant impact on the economy, leading to inflation and unemployment. The RAND study was one of the first to show that the war had a significant impact on the American public, and it led to a number of other studies that confirmed these findings. In the years following the RAND study, there was a growing awareness of the psychological effects of the war on the American public, and this led to the development of a number of programs to help veterans and their families cope with the effects of the war. These programs included counseling, support groups, and other services that were designed to help people deal with the psychological effects of the war. The RAND study was a landmark study in the field of war and mental health, and it led to a number of other studies that confirmed its findings. The study also led to a number of programs that were designed to help veterans and their families cope with the effects of the war.
